Affordability and vulnerability:

The Hardship Hub

Customers struggling to pay their bills are getting support from our extensive range of assistance schemes. We've hosted three regional affordability summits for like-minded organisations and helped launch the North West Hardship Hub, a data-sharing portal for use by the region's money advice community. The hub brings together in one place details of support schemes from across different sectors to reduce delays in providing support.

Our investment in running and improving our services in St Helens South and Whiston will contribute £29m to the economy in your constituency over the next five years.

Some 251 people who live in St Helens South and Whiston work for us directly, many of them now recognised as key workers for the essential services they help deliver.

We support a total of 22,500 jobs throughout the North West through many local companies in our supply chain, some here in St Helens South and Whiston.

We help people who need it in times of financial crisis, like during the recent COVID outbreak.

We'll help lift a quarter of a million people out of water poverty, cut leakage and knock a tenth off water bills so that by 2025 average bills will be less, in real terms, than 2010.

And we'll adapt as we go. As COVID-19 shows, customer priorities change, which is why we constantly seek their views through Water Talk, our 7,700-strong customer panel.
